English/Verbal Reasoning Questions MAY have questions of following types

Question Type 1:

Fill in the blanks with the most suitable words given at the end of the text.

NAPA, Calif. — with roads still blocked by the police and fires still raging across broad swaths of Northern California, Matt Lenzi hiked through smoke-choked vineyards and waded the Napa River to reach the home his father lived in for 53 years. In its place, he found only blackened debris, blackened earth, and ash. “Every piece of vegetation was gone,” said Mr. Lenzi on Tuesday, after going back in the vain hope of finding the pet cat that his father, Carl Lenzi, who is in his 80s, left behind when he fled for his life. “Even the barbecue melted, and that’s built to take heat.”

The fires ravaging California’s wine country since Sunday night — part of an outbreak of blazes stretching almost the entire length of the state — ____1____ to burn out of control Tuesday, as the toll rose to at least 17 people confirmed dead, hundreds hospitalized, and an estimated 2,000 buildings destroyed or damaged. But state and local officials warned that with many people still missing and unaccounted for, and some areas still out of reach of emergency crews, those figures are almost certain to rise.

1. A. Continues
B. To continue
C. Continued
D. Has continued

Ans: Option C

Question Type 2:

The Reading comprehension is followed by questions based on the context of the reading passage. Read the comprehension carefully and choose the best answer to each question. The questions are to be answered on the basis of what is stated or implied in the passage.

One of the most difficult transitions for leaders to make is the shift from doing to leading. As a new manager you can get away with holding on to work. Peers and bosses may even admire your willingness to keep “rolling up your sleeves” to execute tactical assignments. But as your responsibilities become more complex, the difference between an effective leader and a super-sized individual contributor with a leader’s title is painfully evident.

In the short term you may have the stamina to get up earlier, stay later, and out-work the demands you face. But the inverse equation of shrinking resources and increasing demands will eventually catch up to you, and at that point how you involve others sets the ceiling of your leadership impact. The upper limit of what’s possible will increase only with each collaborator you empower to contribute their best work to your shared priorities. Likewise, your power decreases with every initiative you unnecessarily hold on to.

1. Which of the following CANNOT be inferred from the passage?
  - A) A successful manager is the one who leads and delegates effectively
  - B) There is difference between a leader and individual performer.
  - C) Leader must take initiative, put his performance in front and be a firefighter whenever needed
  - D) Your success as a leader depends how effectively you involve and empower others.

The test includes 5-15 questions. Time 15 min

Each question on this test consists of:

A scenario: a description of a work-related dilemma

Instructions: change every question so please make sure to read them carefully. The instructions are located below the scenario.

Please select the choice that best reflects your response/thoughts/beliefs in a given situation: Though there could be other responses as well, but you have to select the most appropriate choice as your probable response.

Scenario

You have an important meeting that has been scheduled with a very important client after a lot of deliberation and hard work. A successful meeting means a lot to you and your company. You wanted to deliver a perfect presentation and worked late at night as you were giving final touches to the presentation. Though you placed an alarm, you woke up late and it is nearly impossible to reach the meeting place on time.

What will you do?

- A) You will call your client and tell him what happened, believing it is not any mistake of yours. Later on you will tell your manager that the client cancelled the meeting
- B) You will try to reach the meeting point and will make an excuse of extraordinary traffic jam.
- C) You will call your client and tell him that you were on your way but you are now going back as you have an emergency at home.
- D) You will call your client and tell him what happened. You will feel that it is your gross error that you didn't plan better and tell your manager exactly what happened. You know that your manager might fire you for this big mistake.
